Frogmen Comb Remote Mountain Site

By Henry Tanner

ROME, April 18 (NYT)-Italian ecurity forces on skis and in helicopters today conducted a vain search for the body of former Premier Aldo Moro after his kid-nappers claimed in a statement that they had thrown him into a mountain lake 100 miles northeast of

The searchers at Lake Duchessa, 5,000 feet high in the Abruzzi mountains, found the lake covered with an unbroken blanket of ice and no human traces on the steep snow-covered slopes around it.

[The Associated Press reported that police said they were checking reports from local residents that they heard a belicopter hovering over the area around 6:30 this morning, leading to speculation that a body may have been dropped. That would account for the lack of footprints after an overnight snowfall.

[Police said that more than one person claimed to have heard the helicopter noise and added that it could not be dismissed without an investigation.] Toward evening, officials of the Christian Democratic party, which Mr. Moro leads, said they had reached the tentative conclusion that the communique of the terror ists was a diversionary maneuver, perhaps to divert police attention and make it easier to move Mr. Moro — dead or alive — from one hiding place to another.

Found in Trash

There was little or no doubt about the authenticity of the state-ment in which the Red Brigades terrorist organization announced Mr. Moro's "execution by suicide."

The statement was found in a trash can in the center of Rome by a staff member of the newspaper II Messaggero after the paper had received an anonymous phone call. Contrary to earlier communica-tions by the Red Brigades, this one was not simultaneously distributed in Milan, Turin and Genoa.

Today marked the 30th year of Christian Democratic rule in Italy. The first Christian Democratic cabinet was formed on April 18, 1948, by then-Premier Alcide de Gasperi. A spectacular move by the publicity conscious kidnappers therefore had been expected for today.

Execution Cited

The terrorists' statement, entitled "The Trial of Aldo Moro," took note of this anniversary and then

"In concurrence with this date we announce that we have carried out the execution of Christian Democrat President Aldo Moro, by suicide. We shall allow you to recover his body, giving you the exact location where it is. The body of Aldo Moro is submerged in the muddy waters ... of the Lake

"This is only the start of a long series of suicides. Suicide must not be only a prerogative of the Baad-er-Meinhof group," the statement added, referring to the German terrorists who were found dead in their prison cells in Stuttgart last

The statement added that Premier Guilio Andreotti and Interior Minister Francesco Cossiga should "tremble" as they think of their "misdeeds." It also threatened Guido Barbaro, the presiding judge at the Red Brigades trial in Turin, and other magistrates, including Mario Sossi, the Genoa prosecutor who was a prisoner of the Red Brigades for 35 days four years ago.

In an unrelated event, investiga-tors this morning stumbled on a hideaway used by the kidnappers of Mr. Moro in the suburbs of

Forced Return of Russians Is Detailed

WASHINGTON, April 18 from the Army Judge Advocate's (AP)—U.S. And British military files said. "If they survived only forces in World War II sent Soviet through capture by the enemy, they soldiers back to Russia knowing that they feared death or exile for the crime of being captured by the ation. Germans, documents released yesterday confirm.

About 400 pages of previously secret documents dealing with the forced return of Soviet soldiers, many of them freed from German prison camps, were released jointly by the national archives and the pritish Defense Ministry.

The documents add little to the general knowledge of the repatriation program. They deal only with a few hundred persons who were interned in Italy, and hundreds of names were physically cut from the documents before their release.

But they do detail U.S. acknowledgement of the fears of Soviet soldiers - and the belief that many were lying because they actually were deserters.

Soviet troops said that they had been "ordered to die fighting rather than be captured," a document

"It is probable that many of the individuals listed in Operation Keelhaul are Red Army deserters or war criminals, but proof thereof is lacking. All are deathly afraid of being returned to Russia or any country under U.S.S.R. control. Almost without exception, these people are congenital liars. The truth is difficult to ascertain."

Operation Keelhaul was the code name for the project, under which about 2 million persons were returned. Many returned voluntarily, but the Americans and British turned over many others against their wishes, under terms of the Yalta agreement.

Many Suicides Many committed suicide rather than return. On June 1 or 2, 1945, 134 Soviet troops committed suitroops handed over 30,000 others to Soviet authorities

At Fort Dix, N.J., 154 Russians who had been captured in German uniforms attempted mass suicide-on June 29, 1945, the date set for their embarkation for Russia. U.S. military police intervened, but only after three men had succeeded. Many captured Soviet soldiers, hating Communism, chose to fight in German uniforms against the Stalin regime. The Soviet Union regarded them as collaborators. Many of the new documents record wrangling between the Russians and the Americans and British over handling of the repatria-tion program in Italy. The Russians accused their allies of propagandizing against repatriation. Col. Pavel Jakovlev, a Soviet repatriation officer, complained to Allied headquarters in Rome on Aug. 20, 1947, that they were "hindering the return of newly discovered collaborators ... Similar actions and affirmations not only hinder repatriation, but present a menace that the repatriation of So viet citizens still remaining in Italy will be brought to collapse.

After U.S. Tests on Islands

A-Cleanups May Take Thousands of Years

By Walter Pincus

WASHINGTON, April 18 (WP)-The federal government has found that it is much more difficult than expected to decontaminate sites of nuclear explosions and make them safe for habitation under U.S. radia-

Despite a three-year, $80-million cleanup program now under way on Enewetak Atoll in the Pacific, the radiation-contaminated northern islands that 20 years ago were the site of U.S. nuclear tests will not be safe for habitation for thousands of years.

The Pacific islands have a special problem: There are only six or seven inches of topsoil over the coral reefs, making deep earth removal of radioactive soil is not feasible. But, according to some Energy Department officials, contamination cleanup after a nuclear attack in the continental U.S. "may be more of a problem. In the Pacific, the islands are porous and water washed the radioactive elements straight into the soil and down to the water table. On the mainland, rain would carry the radioactive material left after

nuclear explosion into rivers, spreading it rapidly over a broad area. Cleanup Complex

The Enewetak cleanup, directed by the Defense Nuclear Agency with Energy Department assistance, is "technologically the most complex ever undertaken on earth," Vice-Adm. Robert Monroe, DNA's director, said

Energy Department officials said last week that they were "surprised at: the amount of plutonium fallout" still remaining in the soil, particularly on Enjebi, once the residential island of the northern Enewetak people. Enjebi, less than a mile square, was the site of three nuclear explosions, Before the cleanup began last May, scientists had predicted that radioactive strontium and cesium contamination in Enjebi's soil would make it unsafe for 25 to 50 years. But they had hoped to be able to locate and remove the longer-lived plutonium and americium, heavy radioactive elements created by the nuclear explosions. These heavy elements emit dangerous alpha rays and, if inhaled or swallowed, can cause lung or bone cancer.

An Energy Department official said yesterday that he did not believe Enjebi soil could be cleaned up enough through soil removal or deep plowing to be considered safe by new Environmental Protection Agency standards. He said that a program of soil removal and plowing could cut the danger of inhalation of radioactive plutonium. But the elements would remain in the soil and be taken up by any vegetation growing on the island. Natives who moved back to Bikini Island, once the site of fallout from

U.S. nuclear tests, are going to be taken off the island soon because they are absorbing strontium from food grown in the still-contaminated soil.

Students Protest At U.S. Embassy

PANAMA CITY, April 18 (UPI)—Panamanian leader Gen. Omar Torrijos urged students to keep their "patriotic screnity" to-day as the U.S. Senate votes on the second and final Panama Canal

There are many [treaty] modifi-cations and interventions which offend, but which we cannot judge offend, but which we cannot judge yet, nor take decisions on them un-til we see the whole package and what they're going to give back to us," he told the students. "There has to be calm, because youths leading the light must keep their patriotic serenity when many peo-olic either with good or bad intenple, either with good or bad intentions, tend to want you to get

While Gen. Torrijos called for calm, leftist students urged a demonstration to coincide with the vote. But student leaders did not say what they would do if the sena-

No Violence Expected

"We don't expect any violence or civil disturbances," Col. Lopez said. He would not specify what the posture involved, but declined to characterize it as as an alert.

An estimated 100 students attacked the U.S. Embassy yesterday and splashed it with red, white and blue ink to protest the pact. Soldiers broke up the protest with tear gas and there were no reported injuries or arrests.

Foreign Minister Nicolas Gonzalez Revilla said that the outcome of the Senate vote today on the final treaty would be a test of the U.S. commitment to the ideal of freedom for other nations. He said that the United States "has preached for many years about decolonization, the principle of non-intervention and the free determination of peoples. Tomorrow the Senate ... will answer to Panama and the world if it is ready to apply these principles ... [It] will tell us if we're wrong in believing in the same values they proclaim ... [lt] will tell us what cost we must pay to be a free and dignified people."

His remarks, made to college stu-dents, were the first on the treaty in recent weeks by a high Panamanian official. The treaty would give Panama control of the 51-mile canal on the last day of 1999. The Senate already has adopted another pact, guaranteeing the canal's neutrality. by one vote over the required twothirds majority.

Senate Vote On Panama

Sen. Hayakawa, who said Friday that he might oppose the second treaty because of his growing dis-like for the Carter administration's foreign and defense policies, met with President Carter at the White House yesterday afternoon. Emerging from the 30-minute meeting. Sen. Hayakawa was asked if he was satisfied with what the President told him.

"No," he replied, "but I will not dismiss it out of hand." He also said he did not expect to make up his mind about his treaty vote until just before the roll call. Sen. Abourezk threatened last week to vote against the treaty to protest the administration's energy policies. Sen. WASHINGTON, April 18 (WP)—President Carter returned to Washington yesterday after a twoday review of the problems con-fronting his administration with his Cabinet and senior White House advisers at Camp David.

The President pointed out some mistakes he thinks he has made, but he made it damn clear that we've had 15 months now and the shakedown cruise is over," Jody Powell, White House press secre-

Yesterday, Mr. Carter met with his Cabinet for an hour before in-viting his White House advisers to join the group. Monday's meetings lasted from 8:45 a.m. until noon. The President later told reporters

FAA Chief Cites Lax Security In Hijackings

WASHINGTON, April 18 (UPI)—Lax security at foreign airports was to blame for a doubling of airline hijackings last year, the Federal Aviation Administration has reported to Congress.

The FAA administrator, Langhorne Bond, said that only five hijacking attempts — all un-successful — took place in the United States. None of the attempts involved a weapon that was taken through the normal passenger screening system, he said.

But a report by his agency said that poor passenger screening else-where in the world allowed persons to carry weapons aboard 21 planes and to hijack 13 of them. It said that would-be hijackers without weapons tried to take over seven additional flights and did so in three of those attempts.

NEW YORK, April 18 (AP)— Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu said yesterday that, in his talks with President Carter, "it was recognized" that annual renewal of Romania's lavorable tariff sta-

Mr Ceausescu told the Foreign Policy Association at a huncheon here that annual re-newal creates uncertainty in trade agreements between his country and the United States.

Mr. Ceausescu said he was "fully satisfied on the whole" with his U.S. tour, which included stops in Texas. Tennessee and Louisiana as well as his Washington talks. He returned to Budapest today. In Washington, a joint commu-nique issued by Mr. Carter and Mr. Ceausescu said that Mr. Carter has

Although Mr. Malik, who began political life as a Trotskyist, has largely ceased to be the hope of Indonesian liberals within the military-based government of Mr. Suharto, his strong concern over rightist Moslem strength continues to link him to his former political friends. "The military regime is not compatible with democracy." he said. "On the other hand, we have to support them in our own interest. It is egotistical."

Mr. Suharto provoked a showdown with the principal Moslem party at the People's Representative Assembly by forcing the adoption of a resolution extending a measure of recognition to the traditional mystic beliefs. It led for the first time to a vote in a body that had always registered decisions by

The crucial point is the need for innovation. And a principal basis of innovation today is research and development. This is one reason why we are concerned with the state of industrial R and D, and why the administration will be focusing much attention on it in the coming year."

Benefits of Innovation

Technological innovation in-creases the number of jobs, the productivity of workers, the growth of the domestic economy, the foreign trade balance and the international status of a country.

A recent study by Robert Brinner for Data Resources, Inc., found that high-technology indus-tries such as electronics and chemicals grew almost three times faster, had twice the productivity per man and expanded their work forces nine times faster than low-technology industries such as shoes and High-technology industries also were less inflationary, raising prices only one-sixth as much as low-tech-nology industries, according to Mr. Brinner, who is now on the staff of President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers.

Evidence of Decline

High-technology industries regularly bring a surplus in foreign trade while low-technology industries cause a deficit — a $29-billion surplus vs. a $15-billion deficit in 1976, according to a National Science Foundation compilation.
The fall-off in U.S. innovative-ported company, SNECMA, on a ness is not so easy to measure. But jet engine, suggests that the U.S. evidence that such a decline is under way is available from the foun-

> Patents of international significance are being issued to foreigners more often than before. In 1963, patents were issued to U.S. citizens by foreign countries 4.5 times more often than patents were issued to foreigners by the United States. This U.S. patent advantage fell sharply by 1975, to only two times the number of significant patents given foreigners. Major innovations are origina> ting abroad more often than in the past. A survey of the 500 most important ones (such as double-knit fabrics, electron beam welding, urethane foams) to enter the marketplace in six industrial non-Communist nations found that the U.S. contribution dropped from 80 per cent in the 1950s to under 60 per cent in the early 1970s.

> Productivity of workers has lagged most in the United States among the six countries. This has been true since 1967, if the same industries are compared from country to country, and since 1960, if the gross domestic product per em-ployed civilian is compared beween countries. (The nations, besides the United States, are Canada, France, West Germany, Britain and Japan.)

 U.S. research and development spending has dropped from 3 per cent of the gross national product in 1963 to 2.25 per cent in 1976.

LONDON, April 18 (UPI)-Foreign ministers from the United States, Britain, Iran, Pakistan and Turkey met today for a day review of world problem spots — chief among them Rhodesia and the rest of southern Africa, the Horn of Africa and the Middle East.

Diplomatic officials said that the United States and Britain would seek to reassure their Asian allies of continued support in face of growing Soviet and Cuban expansion-the Japanese quickly exploited their cheaper labor and production costs to undercut U.S. prices, according to Daniel DeSimone, deputy direc-tor of the Office of Technology Assessment of Congress. "Ironically, the Japanese are finding themselves undersold. The same fibers are now made cheaper in Taiwan, South Korea and Hong Kong." It seems that wholly new technologies, not just adaptations and refinements of existing ones, must be created regularly to stay at the head of the pack.

Basic Research

Breakthroughs, in turn, usually depend on basic scientific research.
So how good is U.S. science today?
In Nobel prizes, the United States is still far ahead in numbers and percentages. U.S. citizens have won 47 per cent more of the awards since 1961 than in the 1946-60 peri-

To Dr. Jerome Weisner, president of Massachusens Institute of Technology, the problem is not a decline in U.S. science or even techpology, but in taking the ideas into the marketplace.

"There are a lot of good things in laboratories now but it's hard to get venture capital," he said. "Maybe it's because the established companies on the stock market are such good buys, maybe because changes in the capital gains tax have created a tax disincentive. But the number of new starts of small, high-technology companies is very low today."

The basic question being asked by both the presidential and conessional studies now getting under way is how to spur innovation.
Things like a tax credit for R and D or some other kind of federal help to high-technology indus-tries may be an idea whose time has finally come," said Mr. DeSimone. A broader rationale was offered by Mr. Brinner: "It's estimated that least one-third, and up to twothirds, of the benefit from R and D spending by a company goes out-side that company, to the public as a whole, providing a social service in a real sense. That seems to me another reason for giving some kind of federal help to high-technology companies at this time."

Mr. Leavis's greatest moment of renown came with his attack in 1963 on the novelist C.P. Snow, an attack both on Mr. Snow's fiction and especially on the essay, "The Two Cultures," in which Mr. Snow saw the intellectual community divided into two parts, literary and scientific, with neither understanding the other.

Mr. Leavis wrote: "It is hardly an exaggeration to say that Snow exposes complacently a complete ignorance." And the essay, said Mr. Leavis, "exhibits an utter lack of intellectual distinction and an embarrassing vulgarity of style."

Those who know Mr. Leavis and the values he championed should not have been surprised, for he had a fierce dislike of chites and members of the intellectual establish-ment. What Mr. Leavis sensed in Mr. Snow was a threat to his own often-stated position that literature was the basic discipline in making a civilized man.

Mr. Leavis had little use for the experimental and the new, for what he called the contrivances of modern literature. He had no kind word, for example, for either Flau-bert or Joyce. He demanded instead what he called intellectual insight and moral earnestness. For burg on Nov. 11, 1901, of a Gerhim, the moral significance of a work of literature outweighed its formal elements. He found the qualities he sought in what he called "The Great Tradition," which he said included writers from Jane Austen through George Eliot. Henry James, Joseph Conrad and D.H. Lawrence.

By his own account, however, the decisive moment in his career occurred in the early 1960s when his intentions were confused with those of Pop Art, and he found himself a favorite. Mr. Lindner in his paintings devoted himself exclusively to the human figure. His women were huge, predatory and weirdly dressed — or undressed. They were the personification of the man-cating female animal who found her apotheosis in his youth in the plays of Frank Wedekind, like "Lulu." They had something of Berlin in the Weimar Republic, and something of New York in its more uninhibited aspects. It gave him great pleasure in 1972 when he was elected to membership of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, and it was gratifying to him that from 1968 onward his work was sought after for re-trospective exhibitions in West German museums — in Hanover, Baden-Baden and West Berlin and at the University of California at Berkeley, the Walker Art Center

A Jazz Musician Who Has Luck...and Organization

By Michael Zwerin

PARIS, April 18 (1HT)—Looking at Gary Burton, the word "levelheaded" comes to mind. And, knowing him, "fortunate."

He is not a Lenny Bruce/Muppel Show out-of-it jazz musician. Under other circumstances, he might have played tympani with a major philharmonic. As it hap-pened, the lights went off one night during a high school rehearsal and he was the only one who continued playing. He realized he could

Burton first surfaced out of Indiana in 1963, with George Shearing. A gangly, hayseed, talented 20, he moved on to Stan Getz, who featured him for three years. He has since won every world poll on vibraharp. He leads a quartet which has produced communicative chamber jazz for a decade, and which began a 40-concert tour of Europe at Espace Cardin on April

He speaks with the easy confidence of someone grateful for his luck, which he nevertheless knows he helped along: "I've always been able to make a living playing the music I want to play. I suppose I've used my talent in an organized way. There are a lot of talented people who seem always to be going off at loose ends. Getz played all the major spots and he went out of his way to draw attention to me. I really can't complain. I've had it easier than most. When I started the quartet, I stumbled on the eclecticism of the sixties. Diversity has become a trend. These days you have to be knowledgeable about rock, jazz, a little classical and some ethnic music.

Milt Jackson was the most inno-vative vibraphonist in the fifties, perhaps the only. His percussive, lyrical, two-mallet lines are among the purest manifestations of belop. Besides him there were only Lionel Hampton and Red Norvo, both rather stuck in their past. "I was lucky with my instru-ment," Burton says. "There isn't much competition on vibes, There was lots of room for innovation when I came up. Nobody was playing with four mallets, for example. Norvo had played quite a bit with four mallets back in the thirties, but by the end of the forties Milt was real popular and Red gave it up. He told me later he was sorry he'd done that."

Burton calls himself "organized." While maturing his playing has not changed basic direction since the beginning and the quartet continues to occupy the same space it al-ways has, a space which, incidentally, serves as a unique bridge be-tween the mainstream of jazz and the permutation called jazz-rock.

Bassist Steve Swallow, a giant on his instrument, writes most of the material, which the group treats collectively, keyed to Burton's fourcollectively, keyed to Burton's four-mallet voicings. They have been to-gether since both worked with Getz, except for a period in the ear-ly seventies when Swallow tried California and Burton taught at Boston's Berklee school of jazz.

"Out of every hundred students I would deal with, maybe four would be really talented. I began to feel that I was wasting my time and theirs, and also carrying out a sort of fraud. When I go somewhere, I just check in. I like to go home and be a normal person living in my neighborhood."

All of the quartet members live in New England, musicians with families who did not want to have to choose between New York and

Los Angeles. Burton says:
"One big advantage is that there are so many colleges in the North-east. We work 30 to 40 concerts a year just a few hours drive from home. I wouldn't get a lot of them if I were living in New York. By the time you've flown up to Boston, rented cars and driven to New Hampshire, you've upped our price a thousand dollars. So moving to

While viable, the group has never reached the mass market. It records for ECM, a small company in Munich.

"If I was on Columbia and they spent $40,000 or $50,000 producing my album," Burton said, "I'd have to sell a hundred thousand before any of us would make money. ## Resolutions and Settlements

The Israeli Cabinet, in what has been described as an effort to reduce frictions between Washington and Jerusalem over the stalemated peace efforts, has affirmed that UN Resolution 242 remains the basis for negotiations with all its Arab neighbor states. The resolution, passed by the Security Countries of the resolution of the security Countries of the security Cou cil after the six-day war in 1967, calls on Israel to withdraw from occupied territories, while giving Israel recognition as a sovereign state within secure frontiers.

In other words, the resolution can have different interpretations. The Arabs have insisted it means total withdrawal from occupied lands. The United States believes it means withdrawal with minor strategic border adjustments. The Begin government accepts some withdrawals, some arrangements for autonomy within the now occupied areas, some suspension of the issue of sovereignty. And Mr. Begin has insisted that everything is

But Israel officially now refers to the West Bank of the Jordan River as Judea and Samaria, dramatizing that region's associa-tion with historic Israel. And what is more to the point, the government has authorized settlements in the occupied territory-indeed, immediately following the Cabinet's statement on Resolution 242, another settlement was begun on land that was once under Jordanian sovereignty and which might be considered part of a Palestinian state.

Settlements are rather more definite than Security Council resolutions or Cabinet statements. Dwellings and their occupants can both be removed, but it is a more troublesome feat than arguing over words and splitting hairs on definitions. It would appear, therefore, that whatever changes in mood the acceptance of the resolution was supposed to represent-and those, it was made quite plain, were minor-the new settlement has canceled out. The situation in the Middle East remains as it was, in familiarly painful suspense.

Why, then, did Mr. Begin's Cabinet make its statement? One can only assume that it was not to offer concessions but to demonstrate the Israeli position that its arguments on behalf of some form of Israeli control over the Gaza Strip, the West Bank, and the Golan Heights were consistent with Resolution 242—which is the common ground of virtually all potential negotiators of peace in the Middle East. This does not include those Arabs, such as the Palestine Liberation Organization, who have called for an end to the state of Israel. Nor does it, presumably, include those Israelis who feel that their ownership of all of Palestine is a legacy of histo-

So Resolution 242, precisely because of its several interpretations, still could constitute a basis for discussion. But it would better fulfill that role if the settlement issue were not pressed by Israel, and if the Arabs cooperated in controlling PLO terrorism that provokes retaliation. Indeed, the whole process of seeking peace could be advanced if it were focused on a diplomatic table, instead of the building of houses in controversial areas, the tossing of bombs and bullets anywhere-and a succession of public pronouncements from all quarters.

Images of the Holocaust

The entry for "Holocaust" in the Encyclopedia Judaica is accompanied by several pages of photographs taken in Europe in the 1930s and 1940s: A congregation of Jews forced to sing Nazi songs in a Baden-Baden synagogue. Jews in Vienna scrubbing a street under the eyes of the Hitler Youth. The synagogue in Landau on fire. The windows of a Jewish-owned shop in Magdeburg smashed during Kristallnacht. Women and children, all wearing yellow stars, arriving at Auschwitz. Naked people lined up for execution at a mass grave in Lithuania. The heaps of corpses found by the British when they liberated the concentration camp at Bergen-

Such are the images of the Holocaust—the name that has attached itself to the torment and murder of millions of Europe's Jews by the Nazis. The images seem to be unforgettable, yet some have forgotten; still others, the young especially, have never truly comprehended the terror of the time.

On Friday evening, Jewish families will gather for the first seder of Passover, the holiday that commemorates the deliverance from bondage in Egypt, and in many homes a prayer will be said for victims of Europe's terrible bondage under Hitler. The seder is based on the biblical injunction to pass the memory of the Exodus from generation to generation: "And thou shalt tell thy son in that day, saying—It is because of that which the Lord did for me when I came forth out of Egypt." The tales of the Exodus, complete with plagues, the Angel of Death, the parting of the sea, the happy ending, seem made for children. But what tales of the Holocaust can a parent bring himself to tell a child? How convey to the young this experience that was burned into the minds and souls of their eld-

Some U.S. schools, including those in New York City, try to teach the brutal history of Nazism, and study guides have recently been distributed to accompany a U.S. television special, "Holocaust," which began on Sunday night and was watched by millions of young Americans of all faiths. The plans of a group of Nazis to march through Skokie, Ill., the home of several thousand former concentration-camp inmates, is, in a perverse way, also a reminder, and numbers of Christians plan to wear the Star of David for a few days

What are the young to make of all this? In a nation where Christians wear Jewish stars and Jewish lawyers defend the rights of Nazis, how can boys and girls be expected to conceive of a time when Nazis actually ruled, and to be a Jew marked one for destruction? How can madness be described to someone who has never seen a madman? The effort must, of course, be made; the gas ovens must not be forgotten. But, in a way, everyone in the United States, Jews and non-Jews alike, can be grateful, even as we try to put the Holocaust into words for our children, that they do find it so hard to understand.

Lucius Dubignon Clay

Thirty years ago this spring, the United States was facing its first major post-World War II test of will: Stalin's blockade of the western sectors of Berlin. Washington's manon-the-spot was Gen. Lucius Dubignon Clay, then both the commander of U.S. military forces in Europe and military governor of the U.S. zone of shattered and occupied Germany. For Gen. Clay, who died Sunday at 80, the Berlin crisis proved to be the summit of his long and distinguished military career. Older Americans will remember him for the proposal he and the late Robert Murphy made to break the ground blockade by military force. And Gen. Clay will be remembered for his conception of the airlift as an amazingly successful alternative.

Those stands alone give a false impression of the general. When he first went to Germany as deputy military governor, Clay believed it possible to work with the Russians. He disagreed with George Kennan's gloomy view of Moscow's long-range intentions. He quickly saw the necessity of, and constantly worked for, a revival of the German economy, preferably of the zones under both Soviet and Western control. In time, of course, he came to see cooperation with the Russians as impossible. But, unlike some others, his record attests to an honest and sincere effort to carry over into the postwar era the military alliance forged against Hitler. Like many others, once he concluded that Stalin's policies, epitomized by the blockade, were the product of aggressive intent, Gen. Clay yielded to no one in his firmness: "If we mean that we are to hold Europe against Communism, we must not budge," he reported back to Washington.

In this age of revisionist history it is worth noting the suggestion of a prominent young historian that the general's proposal to break the ground blockade may have had more validity than his superiors in Washington would concede because they feared that such action would lead to war with the Soviet Union. Daniel Yergin wrote last year in his "Shattered Peace" that "the historian cannot avoid the conclusion that the Russians would either have backed down or been at a disadvantage in a larger confrontation." History does not disclose its alternatives, however. Gen. Clay followed a U.S. tradition in bowing to superior authority—and then finding a successful alternative. He was that kind of man. And when you say that about a highranking U.S. military figure, you are offering THE WASHINGTON POST.

Rights' Impasse: Round 2

By John Bovey

PARIS—Having been commis-sioned by Moscow to explain the fiasco of the Belgrade Conference, Evgeny Rudkovsky (Letters, April 12) denounces as morbid the Western obsession with "a handful of dissidents," who, he assures us, "are threatened with nothing if they do not violate the laws of their countries." Cant of this sort is in itself a confession, but one might just remind Mr. Rudkovsky (1) that any elite-Rostropovich, Sakharov. Solzhenitsyn, Amalrik (or, if he prefers, the Politburo and the Praesidium)—is inevitably measured by the handful, and (2) that it is precisely the laws of the Eastern European countries that prevent them from complying with the agreements they signed at Helsinki concerning free exchanges of per-

Mr. Rudkovsky attributes the rade impasse rather to "the enblocked decisions on military detente. But where in the West does he find enemies of European security, and what would they stand to win? The decisions that Mr. Rudkovsky finds regrettably absent are the dismantling of NATO and, as the Russians made clear at Helsinki in 1975, the preservation of Soviet military predominance and the status quo in Eastern Europe.

All the same, Mr. Rudkovsky assures us that the Belgrade Conference "reached its main goal. It demonstrated the determination of the European peoples to continue along the road started in Helsinki." Unfortunately it demonstrated nothing of the kind, partly because the popular interest, in Europe as in the United States, was so faint as to be almost imperceptible. But in this the people were wrong: for if Helsinki and Belgrade demonstrated anything, it was the total bank-ruptcy of the public diplomacy that is praticed in their name in both the East and the West.

And how is it that Western statesmen find themselves participating in these travesties and even agreeing to a return bout in Madrid?

In response to public pressures, mounted by the Soviet Union and its satellites and Western comrades in the 1960s and intensified after the Czechoslovakian scare in 1968, the leaders of the West were bam-boozled—no other word will do-into meeting their Eastern counter-parts at Helsinki, where they were persuaded to endorse the status quo in Europe, i.e. to freeze the boundaries of Eastern Europe.

The reason advanced in Western Europe and the United States was that such a conference would provide an ideal forum for the conclusion of agreements on human rights and the movement of persons and ideas in cultural exchange. Such

Will the videotape revolution eventually break up this global village...?

ONDON-The videotape inva-Jon of Europe has begun. The magic machines, which can record TV programs and play them back at will, are beginning to compete with each other fiercely in the shops. Arab leaders. I talked with the King about summit possibilities at an interview in his palace here in Amman. It was our third encounter in the past four months, and I was struck again by the physical marks of change.

Hussein's face is deeply lined now. His hair is graying and his tone somewhat weary. He is growing a beard—"like my grandfather," he remarked.

l observed that the call for a summit seemed a departure from a period of doing nothing—especially about the peace negotiations between Egypt and Israel. Hussein said that he had been active all alone in trains to promote others. along in trying to promote cohesion among the Arab states. But he conceded that President Sadat's visit to Jerusalem "caught us all completely by surprise...we were momentarily paralyzed."

Invasion

What broke the paralysis was Israel's invasion of south Lebanon last month. In the past, the King recalled, Israeli attacks had always provoked some kind of military response from the Arab states. He mentioned 1948, 1956 and 1967 as examples.

This time there have been no

ans, and peace. If that occurred, "we would all rejoice."

But, he went on, "we have not had success." On the contrary he noted that UN Resolution 242, providing for mithdeed for providing for withdrawal from occupied lands, was now questioned by the Israelis. He said there was no more prospect of a Geneva con-ference. He said that after the Lebanon incursion he did not even know "what map of their country is in the minds of the Israeli leaders." I asked whether he was saying, in effect, that since the Sadat initiative things had moved backwards.

"Yes." he said, "we have gone

backwards." All Right

As a result, he added, "the Arab world is now moving towards say-ing. 'All right, we tried and failed. Let us look at ourselves, and build our strength, so that in time Israel will assume its true proportions. and we can try again. Let us make ourselves strong so the Israelis will know they cannot threaten us." I expressed doubt it would be possible to convene a summit med ing, especially given the difference between Egypt and Syria. Husses admitted the difficulty. He said is was only starting to lay the groun-work. He claimed he had encourag-ing signs from all countries, includ-

Guess

My guess is that King Hussen has called for the summit as a kind of defensive maneuver. It puts him in good position to resist any pre-sure that he join Sadat in taking with the Israelis. It also puts him in good position to open dealings with the "refusal front" without having to denounce Sadat. While wage gains are likely to with show a smaller rise this year than likely last, most analysts fear that the resilts of the toughest round of bartion is gaining in years may severely crimp reduction in unemployment.
On the basis of comments

On the basis of contracts reached so far this year, economists are predicting that average wages, including innge centains, with a 7-to-5.5 percent, compared with a 7-percent increase last year, inflation is seen declining to 3-percent annually, down from nearly 4 percent. in November, the government's independent panel of economic admen" concluded that a 5.5-percent wage increase was the absolute growth. But they warned that unless pay increases were held below 4 percent, unemployment would show practically no decline.

Assumptions Changed

However, key assumptions underlying the forecast have changed for the worse, according to Armin Gutowski, until this year a member of the panel and now chief economist at Kreditanstalt fuer Wiederaufbau. One major adverse factor is a sharper decline in the dollar than was originally expected. "il overall wage increases are close to 5 percent this year, 3.5 percent real growth can perhaps still be achieved, but I'd say this is an opti-mistic estimate. I'd put 1978 real growth at closer to 3 percent," be Said in an interview.

Other analysis are more pessimistic. An economist at a leading bank here predicts that real GNP growth will "barely reach 3 percent" in the quarter just ended, despite earlier projections as high as 5 percent. "A 5.5-percent average wage rise this year wouldn't be bad under optimal circumstances, he said noting that both industrial output and orders showed a surprisingly large decline in February.

While government officials describe the wage bargaining results so far as "manageable," the government is deeply concerned that future settlements be held as close as possible to its informal guideline of 4.8 percent, sources said.

At any rate, in a country that used to be praised for its exemplary labor-management relations, the recent round of bargaining between the so-called "social partners" was marked by bitter recriminations, strikes and lockouts. Although the air is clearing slightly following the settlement of a regional strike in the metal industry, the IG Metall union has rejected the same contract for workers at Volkwagenwerk which is not covered by one of the regional con-

NEW YORK, April 18 (AP-DJ)-Even the staunchest bears are awed by the compression of such unprecedented activity on the New York Stock Exchange in two days of soaring stock prices.

"It's the most powerful rally I've ever seen," asserted Dudley Eppel, director of block trading at Loeb Rhoades. "There was huge foreign buying and huge retail (individual) buying." The rally that began Thursday and picked up considerable speed Friday was kicked off by "the aggressive buying" of New York banks, according to brokers. Foreign investors and individuals brokers. Foreign investors and individuals were not a big factor until yesterday. Although he thinks further gains may be modest and that downside tests will occur, he adds that he is "less inclined to think the market is going to a new low" than he had been.

Other analysts are reserving judgment, and some are unshaken in their view that conditions characteristic of a true market turnaround have not been met. "I think it's a real trap," says Ned Davis, a respected technician at J.C. Bradford & Co. of Nashville. "Primary trends tend to persist even though contratrend moves can be speciacular and exciting. Alan Shaw of Smith Barney advised clients the rally has been bigger and broader than he expected but does not provide enough evidence to take a definite stand on the basic market trend. "The large stocks were decidedly oversold," he says, "but as of now, they're no longer oversold and have exceeded our price objectives."

Donald Hahn of Becker Securities says be considers the current activity "a psychological reaction to the hope, at least, that the Carter administration has become more concerned about fighting inflation and the declining dollar." But he is sticking by his firm's earlier advice that clients hold high cash reserves. "We don't want to be in the position of someone standing in the path of a 10-ton truck going the wrong way down a one-way street," he says., "So we'd be flexible if we saw more to convince us, but we still don't believe the market has made a sustainable bottom. I don't see anything in this rally to alter that."

U.S.Income, House Data Up in Month

WASHINGTON, April 18 (AP-DJ)—Personal income in March rose a healthy $19.4 billion, or 1.2 percent, to a $1.652-trillion seasonally adjusted annual rate, the Commerce Department reported today. The increase was the largest since December's $20.4 billion, or 1.3percent rise. The February rise was revised down to $7.6 billion, or 0.5 percent, and in January the gain was $2.5 billion, or 0.2 percent.

Factory payrolls climbed $6.3 billion to a $294.2-billion annual rate in March after rising $4.6 billion the month before. Overall private wages and salaries grew at a $15.8-billion annual rate to $1.071 trillion.

The department also reported today that housing starts, another key economic indicator, rose 32 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.07 million units from 1.57 million units in February, when the monthly gain was fractionally higher than the 1.55 million units reported in January.

In another report issued late yesterday, the Federal Reserve report-ed that U.S. factories operated at 82.9 percent of capacity last month. recovering from a downturn earlier in the winter. Increased output of autos contributed to the increase, from $1.9 percent in February.

Capacity utilization among manufacturers was 82.2 percent for the first quarter, down from 82.9 percent in the last three months of

He told the International Iron

Meatballs for Caviar

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK—Few persons of modest attainment hesitate these days about telling you how good they are. Turn on the electronics, open a paper, walk into an office—it doesn't matter—in a few minutes on comes some character to thump his chest and treat you like a full-length mirror.

tion of immoderate self-esteem is a by-product of "hype," a trend word used to deprocess by which hot air turns 11thrate goods into gems which no-body with $5 can

Baker out. Thanks to "hype," athletes of moderate talent get multimilliondollar contracts, movies that feel 38 hours long get nominated for Acad-emy Awards and books that aren't worth a hickory twig get whole for-ests leveled in Canada to supply the paper for best sellers.

"Hype" makes no critical judgments. The thing or person to be sold may be good quality or trash. "Hype" works on the theory that Americans will put their money where the noise is. Therefore, if you want to sell stadium seats, movie tickets, books or yourself, "hype" requires you make noise. The louder the better.

If selling yourself, the noise has to be about you. Unfortunately, one cannot make very loud sounds while saying "Shucks," or "I'm just a hard-working girl," or any of the other typically modest cliches which used to be considered de rigueur if one's work was being even faintly praised.

Muhammad Ali showed everybody the way. Ali accepted mere praise as an insult. Not that he wanted anyone to praise him excessively. Ali insisted on doing that for himself. If obstructed by someone who wanted to proclaim Ali one of the finest fighters of his generation. Ali would silence him with a demonstration of what praise really

Not only was he "beautiful," he would announce: he was also "the

In fact, Ali really was quite good Whether he was as good, pound for pound as Sugar Ray Robinson had been just a few years before is a debate that could only entertain a sports writer, but the sports writers, overwhelmed by Ali's lip work, were not disposed to undertake critical analysis.

It was one of "hype's" greatest victories, and boxing found happiness with the $25-million gate.

Not too long ago, one was reared by the precept that if you were good, there was no need to blow your own horn and, indeed, that to do so was bad form. Current phi losophy holds that, good or bad, if you don't blow your own horn, you can forget about the joys of the upper-income bracket and, indeed, that the spectacle of a sentient adult esteeming himself in public is even endearing to the masses.

And so, it seems, it is, John Lennon declaring that the Beatles were more famous than Jesus, Reggie Jackson announcing that if he played in New York they would name a candy bar after him, Nor-man Mailer's claim to the heavyweight championship of literature such stuff now forms the folklore of the giants.

It is hard to imagine what a per son must suffer after deciding his future depends on his power to prevail at the self-esteem orgies. We see Sammy Davis jr. introduced as "Mister Wonderful," and he does not cringe, but inside, we think—ah, inside!—Davis burns with the embarrassment inflicted upon his

Inside, he must yearn to mumble. "Ah, shucks," or maybe, "I'm just a hard-working ham-and-egger. Such modesty would be justifiable, not only in his case, but also with all the Mr. and Mrs. Wonderfuls flogging their books, pronouncing Washington, hustling their records, swinging their bats, hailing their corporate wisdom in front of the audience. It is, after all, a time when most of the best are second rate, or else why is the national life flatter than last week's soda water?

Maybe the national life ought to start boasting about how marvelous it is. Everybody and everything else is doing it, and if a meatball calls itself caviar, who cares so long as nobody points out that it would taste better with ketchup?

About 10 years ago a group of sleep researchers at the University of Edinburgh launched the first investigations aimed at showing that the function of sleep is to restore. Since then the team has shown that the amount of energy lying in store in cells during sleep is higher than during wakefulness.

The Sleep Watchers and Common Sense

By Harry Nelson

PALO ALTO, Calif.—Common sense may tell you that the reason we sleep is I may tell you that the reason we sleep is to restore our bodies from the ravages of wakefulness, but sleep researchers are still gathering evidence that this indeed is fact. Some scientists, in fact, speculate that sleep is little more than a habit that man somehow fell into and could, if he really tried, dispense with. But a session here of the annual meeting of the Association for the Psychophysiological Study of Sleep, sponsored by Stanford University's Sleep Disorder Center, was de-voted primarily to those who believe that sleep is a period during which cells repair and recharge themselves. They presented some new evidence that a state of sleep called REM sleep—the state during which dreaming occurs—is particu-larly pertinent to the restorative process supposedly taking place.

REM stands for rapid eye movement because the eyes of a dreaming person move from side to side as if watching a tennis game. It has been the most intensely studied of the four stages of sleep. Researchers have noted that a wide variety of physiological activities, ranging from heart rate to tem-perature, are enhanced during REM.

They have made a number of observations through the years which have caused them to associate REM sleep with the building and repair of cells. One observation is that the REM period of sleep in infants is much longer than in adults. This, they reason, has to do with the development of the nervous system, which is under way at a rapid rate in newborn infants.

Newborns whose mothers have been seriously undernourished have less REM sleep than normal, presumably because they lack the necessary nutrients to build and repair

10 Years Ago

About 10 years ago a group of sleep re-searchers at the University of Edinburgh, under Dr. Ian Oswald, launched the first investigations aimed at showing that the func-tion of sleep is to restore. Since then Dr. Oswald's team has shown that the amount of energy lying in store in cells during sleep is considerably higher than during wakefulness and has done other experiments indicating that sleep is a period during which memory-storing occurs. Because protein is essential for cell repair, sleep researchers have been paying attention to the time of day during which protein is synthesized in the brain.

"We believe there may be a higher level of protein synthesis during sleep, said Dr.

Bruce Durie of Edinburgh.
Dr. Rene Drucker-Colin of the National Autonomous University of Mexico reported on cat experiments which tend to firm up the belief that the body rebuilds itself at night and that the REM stage, which lasts about 120 minutes over an eight-hour sleep, has special significance.

Dr. Drucker-Colin made antibodies against proteins in cat brains and released the antibodies into cats' brains. He then took brain-wave readings which indicate the stage of sleep at any given moment.

Immobilizing the brain proteins in this manner resulted in a drastic delay in the onset of REM sleep. Instead of taking only one hour after falling asleep, the REM stage did not appear until five hours afterward, he

This observation has led Dr. Drucker-

Colin and others to speculate that proteins have something to do with triggering REM sleep. Considering the assumed importance of the REM stage, sleep researchers are anxious to learn which proteins may be

Other Proteins

For many years researchers have been relating sleep processes to a class of proteins called monoamines. At one time monoamines were thought to be the "sleep hormone" which presumably triggered the onset of sleep. The activity of many sleeping pills is directed toward the monoamines.

However, sleep researchers are now be-ginning to realize that there are many other proteins in the brain thought to be the generators of sleep and wakefulness. One of these compounds, said Dr. Steven Henriksen of the Salk Institute Center for Behavioral Neurobiology in La Jolla, Calif., may very well be a newly discovered class of proteins called the endorphins. Endorphins, which are manufactured in the brain, have been one of the objects of study by another Salk researcher, Dr. Roger Guillemin, who was a Nobel prize winner last year, partly for his work with endor-

Endorphins are manufactured in an area of the brain which impinges upon areas known to be involved with sleep and wakefulness, according to Dr. Henriksen.

Endorphins, he said, are probably involved in REM sleep and in learning and memory and many other activities.

"But the brain is still an enigma," the neurophysiologist said. "We're still asking the control of the said. the same questions as we asked 20 years

ly slapped a waiter in annoyance because a basket of fruit was not served fast enough to his hotel suite. The suit seeking $1 million in general and $1 million in punitive damages was filed on behalf of Mario Rivas, 34, a waiter at the Century Plaza hotel. The defendant is Sheikh Mohammed al-Fassi, the 51-year-old head of Al-Fassi Trading Corp. His son, Sheikh Mohammed S.A. al-Fassi, 23, made the headlines recently for his lavish redecoration of a Beverly Hills es-tate he and his 19-year-old wife purchased for $2.4 million. Attor-ney Marshall Bitkover, representing Rivas, said that his client suffered facial and ear injuries as a result of the alleged slapping. Bitkover said that he served the papers on al-Fas-si personally because he feared the sheikh might leave town. He said security guards at first wouldn't let him near the senior al-Fassi, but the sheikh finally allowed him in and insisted on paying him $20 for delivering the papers. Bitkover said that al-Fassi later called him, indicating he thought Bitkover was from his own law firm.

> The investigation into the shooting of Larry Flynt, the owner of Hustler magazine, has led nowhere, Chief John Crunkleton of the Gwinnett County police in Georgia reported. Crunkleton said, "If we would come up with a motive it could come up with a motive, it would narrow the field greatly, but at this point we don't have a motive." The police have ques-tioned more than 400 witnesses since a gunman critically wounded Flynt and one of his attorneys in Lawrenceville, Ga., where he was standing trial, on March 6.

In Kalamazoo, Mich., police are keeping a close eye on the garbage, making sure that the trash that's being collected for bounty actually comes from Kalamazoo. Last week, the township announced plans to pay residents $2 for each bag of trash picked up from local streets trash picked up from local streets and delivered to one of four fire stations. "We've had people call from Vicksburg, Richland and other areas, wondering if they could collect the money, too," township Treasurer Leonard Vandenberg said. "We tell them that if they want to come to one township. they want to come to our township to pick up trash, we'll be glad to pay them. I don't know how many are doing that." But Vandenberg acknowledged that it's difficult to determine with certainty whether the trash being brought in actually comes from township streets.

First Woman Finisher Not Even Tired

City placed third.

Boston Marathon Won by Rodgers By Two Seconds

BOSTON, April 18 (NYT) —Bill Rodgers won the 82d Boston Marathon yesterday in near-record time, but not before enduring what he called the "most painful finish"

Ahead by more than 200 yards after 20 miles, the world's top-ranked marathoner crossed the line about 10 yards ahead of Jeff Wells in the closest finish the race has produced. The time margin was

When I saw Jeff closing in on me." Rodgers said, after accepting winner's laurel wreath, "I started thinking, if only this was 26 miles instead of 26 miles 385 yards. In my mind, I was looking at tomorrow's headlines and getting a horrible feeling because the head-lines said I had finished second."

Rally Falls Short

Four times in the last 100 yards or so, as he ran between walls of people toward the finish at the Pru-Tower, the 30-year-old from Melrose, Mass., гиплег glanced over his shoulder. But Wells, a 23-year-old divinity stunever had a day like this in my life.

I've never even won a race before."

Marathon. Previously she finished third and fourth in the women's marathon in seven months, said she got off to a faster pace than she had expected. "I knew I was running good. I was just wondering if I could maintain it," she said.

"People told me I was going pretty fast, but I decided I would do what I could for as long as I could until I got tired," said Barron, whose previous best time was a 2:47 in 1976.

This was Barron's third Boston

Barron, competing in her fifth

dent from Texas, could not sustain the rally that had carried him from sixth place in the last few miles. "I waited too long," said Wells, who tired in the heat last year and finished 12th after an extremely strong showing for 20 miles. There was no heat yesterday, or even any sun. It was cold and overcast, with 46-degree temperature that prompted some experts to predict a record time. They were almost right Rodgers, best among a record field of 4,700, ran the second-fast-est Boston Marathon. His time of 2

Six Former Winners

The big field may have been the finest ever assembled for a marathon. It had six former Boston winners, as well as eight of the top winners, as well as eight of the top ten finishers from last year, includ-ing Jerome Drayton of Canada, the defender. It also had Frank Shorter, running his first Boston Marathon and seeking to become the first winner of the Olympic marathon to win here. Eight Olympic champions had made 14 unsucessiul bids.

Shorter, the gold medalist at Mu-nich in 1972 and silver medalist at Montreal in 1976, ran strongly for nearly 12 miles in a shoulder-toshoulder confrontation that also involved Rodgers, Kevin Ryan of New Zealand and Essa Tikkanen of Finland.

At Wellesley, though, Shorter fell back 100 yards from the top group. and the look on his face sugges he was beginning to lose control. He finished in 23d place, with a time of 2:18.16. Drayton, never in contention, had dropped out by then.

Opening the Lead

Just before they started up the first of the three Newton hills, Rodgers, Ryan and Tikkanen were still running side by side. But then Rodgers began pulling away — first by five yards, then 20, then 50. Going up Heartbreak Hill, the last and biggest of the slopes, Rodgers led Ryan by 150 yards, with Wells still not threatening.
But at Cleveland Circle, where the leader ran past the Bill Rodgers Running Center he operates there, his wornes began. With four miles to go, Wells was beginning to close the gap.

"Jeff is known for his finish," said Rodgers, "and I'm not. My plan was to tear it open on the hills. and then just hang on. But I was falling spart. The crowd made me very gung-ho. I've never been cheered like that in my life." Tikkanen finished third, a full minute back of Wells and only two seconds ahead of fourth-place Jack Fultz of Franklin, Pa., the 1976 winner. Randy Thomas, a protege of Rodgers', finished fifth, followed

Bruins, Islanders, Flyers And Canadiens Triumph

BOSTON, April 18 (AP)—Center Peter McNab scored two goals and assisted on another in helping the Boston Bruins to a 6-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks here last night in the opening game of their best-of-seven National Hockey League quarterfinal playoff.

McNab, a 41-goal scorer during the regular season, set up a goal by defenseman Brad Park just 24 seconds after the opening faceoff. Then, with the Bruins ahead, 2-1, McNab scored at :21 of the second period and again at 6:12.

Wayne Cashman, Bobby Schmautz and Terry O'Reilly, also scored for the Bruins. O'Reilly also had three assists. Chicago averted a shutout on a power-play goal by Grant Mulvey late in the opening period. The Bruins dominated the action from the opening faceoff, outshooting the Black Hawks, 41-25.

Islanders 4, Maple Leafs 1

At Uniondale, N.Y., Mike Kaszycki and Mike Bossy had a goal and an assist each in a threegoal first period that carried the New York Islanders to a 4-1 victory over Toronto in the opener of their playoff series.

Kaszycki took Bossy's cross-ice pass at the Toronto blue line and broke in alone on goalie Mike Palmeteer before lifting a 20-foot shot over the goalie's right arm at 7:58. Bob Nystrom made it 2-0 at 14:09, when he charged toward a loose puck 20 feet from the net. Palmeteer rushed out after the disc, but Nystrom reached it first and Bourne's 15-foot shot past Palmeteer's right leg for a 3-0 lead.

Darryl Sittler scored for Toronto on a power-play at 12:48 of the second period but Wayne Merrick made it 4-1 just 1:18 later.

Flyers 4, Sabres 1

At Philadelphia, Rick MacLeish scored a pair of goals and goalie Bernie Parent had an exceptional game as Philadelphia defeated Buffalo, 4-1, in their opening playoff

MacLeish, a 31-goal scorer in the macLeish, a 31-goal scorer in the regular season, sent the Flyers ahead on a power play at 6:19 of the first period when he tipped in a 50-foot shot by Orest Kindrachuk. The Philadelphia lead lasted just 15 seconds, as winger Terry Martin, on his first shot of the playoffs, backbanded a score past Papert.

backhanded a score past Parent, who was sprawled on the ice. But in the second period, Bob Kelly sent the Flyers ahead to stay just 10 seconds after skating out of the penalty box. He took a pass from Kindrachuk and beat Buffalo goalie Don Edwards on his left side from 10 feet at 1:08. Meanwhile, Parent stopped 24 shots, including at least half a dozen that could be classed as excep-

Canadiens 6, Red Wings 2 At Montreal, Dong Jarvis led a

four-goal burst in the second period and Yvan Cournoyer tallied twice as Montreal began its quest for a third straight Stanley Cup championship, beating Detroit 6-2.

After a scoreless first period, the Canadiens, the league's highest scoring team, turned on the power. Jarvis opened the scoring at 5:53 and 53 seconds later, Rejean Houle made it 2-0.

After Detroit's Bill Lochead scored at 7:45, Cournoyer got the first of his two goals, at 14:39, on passes from Houle, who also had three assists, and defenseman Larry Robinson, who had two assists.

Steve Shutt capped Montreal's decisive second-period scoring spree, connecting at 17:31, before the Red Wings' Dale McCourt closed out the scoring in the period with a goal at 18:56.

Martin Feuds With Weaver

NEW YORK, April 18 (AP)— Manager Billy Martin of the New York Yankees had to be restrained from charging at manager Earl Weaver of the Baltimore Orioles during the seventh inning of last night's 6-1

Oriole victory.

Tempers flared after New York reliever Rich Gossage fired a pitch over Rick Demp-sey's head. As the teams changed sides, home plate umpire Joe Brinkman summoned Weaver from the dugout and warned the Orioles not to retali-

"Weaver said something from the dugout like 'We're gonna get you," Brinkman explained. "I wasn't sure who he meant, but I assume it was [Yankee catcher Thurman] Munson. With that statement, I thought it warranted a warning."

Brinkman then delivered the same message to Martin - "it was only fair to warn both" but the Yankee manager exploded and was held back from charging the Baltimore dugout by Brinkman and first base umpire Dale Ford.

Both managers were still steaming after the game. "Weaver said if Brinkman didn't warn me, they would throw at Munson," Martin said. "Brinkman should have thrown him out of the game for saying that and I'm going to say that right to his [Weaver's] face tomorrow at home plate and if that little midget says one word. I'm going to slap him just like you'd slap a girl." Weaver denied that he threatened to have his pitcher throw at Munson or any of the Yank-"I just told Munson, 'You'd better get out there and tell Gossage to stop it." he said. "You can ask anybody in the American League if I've ever told one of my pitchers to hit anybody. By Rob Hughes LONDON, April 18 (IHT)-The , gate receipts of a million dollars are already banked, television networks are preparing to beam the action the world over and those players who are fit or can free themselves from the burden of club fixtures have begun to tremble with the excitement of the first Englandwersus-Brazil soccer match at Wembley stadium for 15 years. It may only be a "friendly" international match between a visiting nation that seeks practice before defending its role as World Cup favorites and a host whose place in high soccer society slipped when it failed to make the World Cup finals. But ask any Brazilian for that matter any player from most countries—where he would like to play once in his life...and Wembley, the cradle of world soccer, will be top or second top of his list. That, and the traditional contrast of two nations steeped in football worlds apart, is what attracts us all to the stadium tomorrow night. Some of us have seen Brazil recent-ly in Paris and Hamburg and so know that it has blended much of the European style into its game. But no matter, the Brazilians come from a land representing flair and touch skills and the rhythm of samba and it cannot all be buried beneath added aggression, stamina lege players.

"The key was to get a first-round pick from somebody," the 49er general manager, Joe Thomas, said in announcing the trade here.

The 49ers have not had a firstround selection in the last two drafts, because of the team's trade for Jim Plunkett two years ago. But this year they will have the 7th (their own) and 24th spots in the first round. 27th birthday yesterday, set a 49er record by rushing for 1,203 yards in 1976. He totaled 931 last season, despite missing some playing time

But Thomas acquired Simpson, the second-leading running back in NFL history, from the Buffalo Bills last month in exchange for draft choices, and it was obvious that a deal would be made for Williams.
"I know people were concerned that we were giving away all our draft picks in the O.J. trade. But that's not the way I operate." Thomas said yesterday. "This trade will offset practically the entire O.J. trade." The draft is eshelled Mountain.

Solomon, a three-year NFL veteran, has not been a regular starter for Miami. He caught 12 passes for 181 yards last season, scoring one touchdown. He also returned 10 kickoffs for 273 yards and scored on a 90-yard return, and returned 32 punts for 285 yards. Roberson, 25, played free safety with the Dolphins last year, and Thomas said he also will be count-

Meatballs for Caviar

NEW YORK—Few persons of modest attainment hesitate these days about telling you how good they are. Turn on the elec-tronics, open a paper, walk into an office-it doesn't matter-in a few minutes on comes some character to thump his chest and treat you like a full-length mirror.

Public exhibi-

derate self-esteem is a by-product of "hype," a trend word used to describe the selling process by which hot air turns 11thrate goods into gems which nobody with $5 can afford to be without. Thanks to "hype," athletes of moderate talent get multimilliondollar contracts, movies that feel 38 hours long get nominated for Academy Awards and books that aren't worth a hickory twig get whole for-ests leveled in Canada to supply the paper for best sellers.

"Hype" makes no critical judgments. The thing or person to be sold may be good quality or trash. "Hype" works on the theory that Americans will put their money where the noise is. Therefore, if you want to sell stadium seats, movie tickets, books or yourself, "hype" requires you make noise. The louder the better. If selling yourself, the noise has to be about you. Unfortunately. one cannot make very loud sounds while saying, "Shucks," or "I'm just a hard-working girl." or any of the other typically modest cliches which used to be considered de rigueur if one's work was being even faintly praised.

Muhammad Ali showed everybody the way. Ali accepted mere praise as an insult. Not that he wanted anyone to praise him excessively. All insisted on doing that for himself. If obstructed by someone who wanted to proclaim Ali one of the finest fighters of his generation, Ali would silence him with a demonstration of what praise really

Not only was he "beautiful," he would announce; he was also "the In fact, Ali really was quite good. Whether he was as good, pound for pound, as Sugar Ray Robinson had been just a few years before is a debate that could only entertain a sports writer, but the sports writers, overwhelmed by Ali's lip work, were not disposed to undertake critical analysis.

It was one of "hype's" greatest victories, and boxing found happiness with the $25-million gate.

Not too long ago, one was reared by the precept that if you were good, there was no need to blow your own horn and, indeed, that to do so was bad form. Current philosophy holds that, good or bad, if you don't blow your own horn, you can forget about the joys of the upper-income bracket and, indeed, that the spectacle of a sentient adult esteeming himself in public is even endearing to the masses. And so, it seems, it is, John Lennon declaring that the Beatles were more famous than Jesus, Reggie Jackson announcing that if he played in New York they would name a candy bar after him, Norman Mailer's claim to the heavyweight championship of litera-ture—such stuff now forms the folklore of the giants.

It is hard to imagine what a person must suffer after deciding his future depends on his power to pre-vail at the self-esteem orgies. We see Sammy Davis jr. introduced as "Mister Wonderful," and he does not cringe, but inside, we think—ah. inside!—Davis burns with the embarrassment inflicted upon his flogging their books, pronouncing in Washington, hustling their records, swinging their bats, hailing their corporate wisdom in front of the audience. It is, after all, a time when most of the best are secondrate, or else why is the national life flatter than last week's soda water?

Maybe the national life ought to start boasting about how marvelous it is. Everybody and everything else is doing it, and if a meatball calls itself caviar, who cares so long as nobody points out that it would taste better with ketchup?

About 10 years ago a group of sleep researchers at the University of Edinburgh launched the first investigations aimed at shoring that the function of sleep is to restore. Since then the team has shown that the amount of energy lying in store in cells during sleep is higher than during wakefulness.

The Sleep Watchers and Common Sense

By Harry Nelson

DALO ALTO, Calif.—Common sense may tell you that the reason we sleep is to restore our bodies from the ravages of wakefulness, but sleep researchers are still gathering evidence that this indeed is fact. Some scientists, in fact, speculate that sleep is little more than a habit that man somehow fell into and could if he really tried, dispense with.

But a session here of the annual meeting of the Association for the Psychophysiological Study of Sleep, sponsored by Stanford University's Sleep Disorder Center, was de-voted primarily to those who believe that sleep is a period during which cells repair and recharge themselves.

They presented some new evidence that a state of sleep called REM sleep—the state during which dreaming occurs-is particularly pertinent to the restorative process supposedly taking place.

REM stands for rapid eye movement because the eyes of a dreaming person move from side to side as if watching a tennis game. It has been the most intensely studied of the four stages of sleep. Researchers have noted that a wide variety of physiological activities, ranging from heart rate to temperature, are enhanced during REM.

They have made a number of observations through the years which have caused them to associate REM sleep with the building and repair of cells. One observation is that the REM period of sleep in infants is much longer than in adults. This, they reason, has to do with the development of the nervous system, which is under way at a rapid rate in newborn infants.

Newborns whose mothers have been seriously undernourished have less REM sleep than normal, presumably because they lack the necessary nutrients to build and repair

10 Years Ago

About 10 years ago a group of sleep re-searchers at the University of Edinburgh. under Dr. Iar. Oswaid, launched the first investigations aimed at showing that the func-tion of sleep is to restore. Since then Dr. Oswald's team has shown that the amount of energy lying in store in cells during sleep is considerably higher than during wakeful-ness and has done other experiments indi-cating that sleep is a period during which memory-storing occurs. Because protein is essential for cell repair. sleep researchers have been paying attention to the time of day during which protein is synthesized in the brain. "We believe there may be a higher level of protein synthesis during sleep, said Dr.

Bruce Durie of Edinburgh.

Dr. Rene Drucker-Colm of the National Autonomous University of Mexico reported on cat experiments which tend to firm up the belief that the body rebuilds itself at night and that the REM stage, which lasts about 120 minutes over an eight-hour sleep. has special significance.

Dr. Drucker-Colin made antibodies against proteins in cat brains and released the antibodies into cats' brains. He then took brain-wave readings which indicate the stage of sleep at any given moment.

Immobilizing the brain proteins in this manner resulted in a drastic delay in the onset of REM sleep. Instead of taking only one hour after falling asleep, the REM stage did not appear until five hours afterward, he

This observation has led Dr. Drucker-

Colin and others to speculate that proteins have something to do with triggering REM sleep. Considering the assumed importance of the REM stage, sleep researchers are anxious to learn which proteins may be involved.

Other Proteins

For many years researchers have been relating sleep processes to a class of proteins called monoamines. At one time monoamines were thought to be the "sleep hormone" which presumably triggered the onset of sleep. The activity of many sleeping pills is directed toward the monoamines

However, sleep researchers are now be-ginning to realize that there are many other proteins in the brain thought to be the generators of sleep and wakefulness.

One of these compounds, said Dr. Steven Henriksen of the Salk Institute Center for Behavioral Neurobiology in La Jolla, Calif, may very well be a newly discovered class of proteins called the endorphins.

Endorphins, which are manufactured in the brain, have been one of the objects of study by another Salk researcher, Dr. Roger Guillemin, who was a Nobel prize winner last year, partly for his work with endor-Endorphins are manufactured in an area of the brain which impinges upon areas known to be involved with sleep and wakefulness, according to Dr. Henriksen.

Endorphins, he said, are probably involved in REM sleep and in learning and memory and many other activities.

But the brain is still an enigma," the neurophysiologist said. "We're still asking the same questions as we asked 20 years
